

BRITAIN AND FRANCE SWING INTO ACTION TO DEFEND SCANDINAVIA; NO DISCLOSURE OF NATURE OF AID

Official Circles Merely Speak of "Appropriate" Allied Naval Measures In Response To Norway's Appeal — Paris Reports of Invasion of Sweden Are Not Confirmed By Official Sources

By Kenneth Downs, I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Apr. 9.—In response to an urgent appeal from Norway, Britain and France today swung into motion undisclosed but long prepared military operations for the defense of Scandinavia.

There was no official disclosure of the nature of this aid, but it was presumed to involve the Anglo-French expeditionary force of 1,000 men, mobilized two months ago for the assistance of Finland.

Official circles merely spoke of "appropriate" allied naval measures in response to Norway's appeal.

But even as Denmark buckled and Norway seemed likely to capitulate, rumors spread in Paris that the German invasion has already spread to Sweden.

Communications with the Swedish capital were disrupted. (Editor's note: The Paris reports of an invasion of Sweden were not confirmed in any quarter. Latest direct word from Stockholm this morning, indicated no such German aggression.)

The German invasion of Scandinavia is expected to set off a powder train which will carry over most of the map of Europe.

STOCKHOLM, Apr. 9.—Fearful of immediate invasion by Nazi Germany, on the heels of attacks against Denmark and Norway, the Swedish government summoned its parliament into extraordinary and secret sessions tonight to discuss measures of resistance against the German military machine.

While reports in Stockholm told of the Nazi occupation of Copenhagen, and the bombing of Oslo, the Swedish government made known its intention of standing firm against "provocation measures by any power."

Although little Denmark capitulated speedily to the Nazis, placing itself under "German protection, and giving Adolf Hitler his first puppet monarch" in the person of King Christian, reports in Stockholm indicated that Norway was resisting to the limit of its power.

Landing from transport and warships, German troops mounted machine guns in the streets of Trondheim and other ports. At Narvik, chief port for shipment to the Reich of Swedish iron ore, the Germans were reported to have lost several warships to the

Woman Injured In Two Car Crash at Green Lane

Two cars crashed at Green Lane and Farragut avenue yesterday afternoon. One woman was hurt and received treatment at the Harriman Hospital from which institution she was discharged.

One car was operated by Raymond Leitner, Philadelphia, and was traveling north on Green Lane, while the other car, driven by Louis Loggers, Maynes Lane, was going west on Route 13.

Martha Kratz, Philadelphia, was in the Loggers car. She suffered injuries about the limbs and head.

Brothers Die at Treviso Within Seven-Hour Period

Woolsey Baxter, 52, for many years an employee of Philadelphia State Hospital, at Byberry, died early yesterday morning at his home in Treviso, Bucks county.

His death came only seven hours after his brother, Harry T. Baxter, prominent Republican leader, had died suddenly while visiting in Treviso, but, since he was in a coma, he did not know of his brother's death.

The brothers were born and lived for many years in the 26th ward, South Philadelphia. Woolsey Baxter worked in the apothecary division of the Byberry institution until five years ago, when he retired.

He is survived by his wife and five children, Thomas, Florence, Robert, Bruce and Dorothy. Joint funeral services will be held in funeral parlors at 50th and Catharine Sts., Philadelphia, Thursday at 2 p. m., and the brothers will be buried side by side in Mt. Moriah Cemetery.

Sellersville Bund Club Again Cited By Board

Taking action for the second time the State Liquor Control Board yesterday cited the Deutschhorst Country Club, a German-American Bund camp in Sellersville.

The new citation charges the club is a center of un-American activities and is operated solely for the benefit of a Fred H. Diekmann and the Rockhill Realty Company.

The first action was filed in October shortly after Bund Fuehrer Fritz Kuhn announced at a meeting there: "Hitler can lick the world." The club did not apply for a 1940 license. The 1939 license has expired and the current action is taken to clear up the previous citation. A hearing will be held at the Liquor Board offices, 260 S. 15th St. next Tuesday.

MARRIAGE LICENSES IN MARCH SHOWED A GAIN

Topped List for March of '39 By A Total of Twenty-Nine Licenses

47 IN 3 DAYS OF APRIL

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 9.—Forty-seven couples received licenses to wed during the first three days of April, continuing the rush which brought a crop of 250 brides and grooms during March. The March list for 1940 topped that of March, 1939, by 29 licenses.

The new Pennsylvania State law, starting Friday, May 17, will require all applicants for marriage licenses to present a medical examination certificate showing the applicant has no venereal disease in a contagious state. The law is the same as is now in operation in New Jersey and several other States. No detailed particulars of the law have been obtained at the local marriage license bureau as yet, but further instructions are looked for in a few weeks.

The contents of the medical certificate to be presented when making an application for marriage license before a Justice of the Peace or at the marriage license bureau here, will be held strictly confidential by the authorities.

Thirteen States were represented by the 250 couples applying for licenses in March. The average age of the male applicants was 25 years, while the females averaged 24 years.

Close to 80 per cent. of the applicants in March were non-residents of Bucks county, the majority of visitors coming from Trenton and Philadelphia.

Heading the "march of brides for March" in Bucks county was Mary Cohan, 30-year-old New York night club singer and daughter of the famous George M. Cohan, and George Ronkin, 32, accordion player.

Justice of the Peace James Laughlin, of Bristol township, was out in front again in the number of marriages performed in March, with a total of 62 couples. So far this year Justice Laughlin has performed the ceremony for 181 couples.

Others present: Arlene Reynolds, Norma Kerr, Mabel Heath, Miriam Dewsnap, Gerald Walterick, "Billy" Crawford, Henry VanLenten, Jeanne was the recipient of many gifts.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Eighty veterans of what is known as "Old Company G" met in the Albert R. Atkinson, Jr., Post home of the American Legion, Doylestown, in annual reunion on Friday evening. The date was the eve of the 23rd anniversary of the declaration of war on Germany by the United States.

There were present, veterans of the company over a period of years.

Sarah Ann Smythe, 81, widow of Adam A. Smythe, died last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Russell Gilbert, at Furlong. She had been ill for two weeks with pneumonia.

The only survivors are two daughters, Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Martha Woolley, Lahaska. Mrs. Smythe was born in Indiana and moved to Philadelphia in 1883. She had been a resident of Bucks county for the past seven years, her husband having died a number of years ago.

William Worswick will speak to the Kellers Church senior extension club on Friday evening in Kellers Church Grange Hall, having as his subject, "Wood and Its Uses."

The South Schuylkill Senior Extension Club, of Schuylkill county, will visit the club and present a one-act play, "Party Line." The group won second prize at the farm show at Harrisburg with this play.

The refreshment committee is composed of Ralph Schuster, Herman Frei and Grace Johnson, and the game committee is composed of Frances Guers, Michael Guttman, and Edna Berger.

Robert Gene Bryan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren F. Bryan, Doylestown, who was injured while playing football for Doylestown high school last fall, is a patient in Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, where he will have to undergo a bone scraping operation on his leg.

Superintendent of Bucks County public schools, J. Harry Hoffman, states that the Upper Bucks County Teachers Association will conduct a meeting in Quakertown high school, this evening, the hour being 7.45.

The program will include the following: Music, Quakertown high school mixed chorus, Miss Sara Fisher, conducting; "Moonbeams" (Herbert); "The Big Brown Bear," Mana-Zucca Riegger; "Green Cathedral," Carl Hahn; "O Morn of Beauty" (Shibellus); play, Quakertown pupils, second grade, directed by Miss Evona Oplinger; "Haensel and Gretel," with Joan Heft, James Smith, Donreath Walek, Betty Trautman, Nancy Knerr, Richard Reed, James Yost, Mary Fischer, Herbert Besch, James Church, Richard Derr, Floyd Geiger, Edward Herman, Bobby Mohr, Shirley Bright, Margaret Filburn, John Shearer, Jane

RICHARD WOOD SPEAKER AT LAST FORUM MEETING

"America's Responsibility For An Enduring Peace" is The Topic of Address

WORLD A COMMUNITY

"America's Responsibility for an Enduring Peace" was the topic of the address given by Richard Wood at the public forum in the Friends Meeting House last night.

"We no longer have a choice as to whether we shall build an international community," said Mr. Wood. "It has come into being through technological advances in many fields."

"We are now living in a world which has become a community. We cannot withdraw. We of necessity must feel the ills of other members of this community. For our own survival, the United States must be prepared to settle disputes through the arbitration of a third party; must attempt to reduce armaments in all countries through international agreements; and must disarm economically by reducing trade barriers so that the so-called 'have-nots' can purchase what they lack in orderly ways."

"These are immediate steps by which the United States can use its influence for an enduring peace. National frontiers have long been ignored by men of ideas. There is already a community of mind and spirit. Whether we like it or not, we find ourselves in an interdependent community. We must learn how to live in this community harmoniously. Nations are temporal, but mankind is eternal."

BOROUGH COUNCIL HOLDS BRIEF SESSION

Hears Report of Police Committee; Approves Bills, Then Recesses

FOUR WERE ABSENT

In a session marked by its brevity Borough Council last night heard the report of the police committee, approved the bills and then recessed to reconvene at the call of the president.

Four councilmen did not respond to the calling of their names and were marked absent. These were Councilmen Foster, Mulligan, Clark and Conklin. The session was called to order by President Wagner and following the reading of the minutes the report of the police committee was read.

The police report showed the officers made 11 arrests during the month of March. One was discharged, five committed to the county prison, three fined and two cases continued. Two hundred and eight lodgers were given shelter, five doors were found unlocked, three arc and 10 incandescent lights were reported out and 17 were fined for all-night parking.

Dr. Daniel H. Thomas To Be Dinner Speaker Here

Dr. Daniel H. Thomas will speak before the Bristol Fathers' Association on April 11th, at the dinner meeting in the Bristol high school cafeteria.

Dr. Thomas began his study of history at the University of Alabama, and continued at the University of Pennsylvania where he received his Ph. D. degree. He then held a Harrison Research Fellowship for the purpose of study in the history of Belgian neutrality when the present war began. He was again in Belgium on a Belgian-American Foundation Fellowship and continued the study of the same subject.

For his subject on Thursday evening he will have "The Position of Belgium and Holland in European Power Politics." His talk will give the background for the present situation; then the military line-up on the Western front, and the possible plans which he thinks are open for Hitler to choose from, with particular attention to the possibility of his choosing to violate Belgian and Dutch territory.

Dr. Arthur Cook, the speaker originally scheduled to appear before the Fathers on Thursday, has arranged for Dr. Thomas to come in his stead. Dr. Cook will speak before the Association next year.

Anxious To Make Play Tournament A Success

Committees for the one-act play tournament to be held in the high school April 12 are working hard to make this fifth annual contest a success.

Rev. Gaskell Speaks On "And It Came To Pass"

NEWPORTVILLE, Apr. 9.—"And it came to pass—" This was the subject of the Rev. Samuel Gaskell, pastor of Emile Methodist Church, as he addressed members of the Men's Christian Fellowship League of Lower Bucks County, in the Newportville Church, last evening.

The Rev. Gaskell pointed out that although each can select his mode of living, he can't control history or environment in general. "We are the kind of persons we are because we choose to be that kind of person," he added. It was recalled that Cyrus the Great and Napoleon were "two boys who went wrong, having a difficult time in their youth." Rev. Gaskell brought out the point that "We shouldn't worry. God's Word will stand forever... even though Heaven and earth will pass away. Because you are in the Christian work, it shows that God is still working with us."

The men were reminded that although history comes and goes, some things being here today and gone tomorrow, God never fails and His Word is eternal.

Howard Smoyer, Bristol, was the presiding officer. Mr. Harris, Emile, chairman of the banquet committee, reported that the affair will take place in Bristol Methodist Church on April 19th, the speaker to be George G. Dilworth, secretary of the Atlantic District of the American Bible Society. The next meeting will take place in Morrisville Presbyterian Church on May 13th.

VOICE OF THE CLOCKS

People often complain of sleepless nights and say they heard the clock strike many times. The voice of the clock may not be a pleasant sound when one wants to be oblivious to it in sleep. Still, those voices may start thoughts which will help calm restless minds.

There used to be grandfather's clock, that tall and dignified sentinel of the stairway, which ticked out the minutes on its unhurried way. Its slow strike was a suggestion that life should not be taken too impatiently, that there is plenty of time for everything, and that man should live out his life with less hurry and scurry.

An opposite point of view was suggested by the old kitchen clock in many homes, which had a quick and tingling strike. As a denizen of the working kitchen, its fast strike seemed to suggest that there is a lot of work to be done, and it were better to be up and at it.

Then there is the light and silvery tone of many clocks, which seem to suggest that life is full of pleasant beauty, full of charm and music, for those who look for that side of existence.

Then there is the deep toned bell effect, which suggests the richness of experience, and how folk can find the deeper happiness by seeking the higher values of life.

Some clocks, like some people, are always ahead of time. No lagging by the way for these fast and active tickers. And there are those that lag behind, and are always hurrying in vain to keep up with the rest.

So clocks seem to be like people, grave and gay, fast and slow. Perhaps those who reflect how much they seem like human beings, and how they keep ticking away with tireless energy for a century, may forget their troubles and go to sleep.

OLD HOME WEEK

Some years ago a move spread over the country to hold Old Home Week celebrations. When the idea was novel, many former residents were induced to come back to re-visit former scenes. Some individuals look at the places where they grew up or spent many years with some contempt. They used to say those old bugs were "one horse places," and they wanted no more of them, never wanted to see them again, nor set eyes on anyone who lived there.

If people have done their part in the life of a community they should have some real friends there, whom they would wish to see again as the years pass. If a person has made no friends in a town and never wants to see it again, it is a sign that he has contributed little to the place.

In many places celebrations of this nature are mostly business events, a method for attracting trade and drawing in visitors. It is a desirable plan, which enlarges business and promotes progress.

People should always want to celebrate an Old Home Week of their own as often as possible. It is good to go back to the old scenes, and to show old friends they are not forgotten. The people who cherish old friends and old scenes promote new friendships wherever they go.

Japan tells the world she has won the war in China. All she has to do now is convince the Chinese who don't believe it.

The CAIRO GARTER MURDERS

CHAPTER XXXVI

The chief inspector looked up quickly. "You don't think Melhorne had a hand in the killings?"

"No. That was Hart's assignment, with Zara as a willing assistant. Stag can get plenty tough when he wants to, but he's not essentially cruel." The speaker hesitated, glanced down at the police on guard below. "My first faint suspicions took shape when, on Philipides' yacht, I watched Hart deliberately pull the legs off a beetle. Later I watched Zara look at a certain mummy in Ladd's collection—the one of the woman who was buried alive. Suppose we try to find out what happened to Bruce Kilgour?"

North and Clive approached Major Richardson, talking to a group of all people, that cardonic individual known as M. Levasseur. The Frenchman advanced, a smile on his sallow features.

"Please accept my congratulations, Captain. So skillfully have you played your part I was quite taken in." In fact, it is as well I followed you to Port Said, hein? Our arrival here has not been entirely unfortunate, perhaps?"

In answer to Hugh North's look of surprise, Major Richardson explained that M. Levasseur, far from being a dealer in illegal munitions, was a colonel of the Deuxieme Bataillon—French Army Intelligence and an amateur Egyptologist of some repute. He had been assigned to follow Follensbee from Marseilles because Syria was dangerously close to the contagion of insurrection.

"You shadowed me?" North grinned. "Congratulations, I never guessed it—was on the lookout, too. Where'd you get the police?"
"From the station at Et-Teffeh. I showed my credentials and Monsieur l'Inspecteur there lends me a car, not very willingly, but he lends it." He turned. "Our friend le docteur Ladd is past help?"

Richardson nodded. "I've done everything I can, but he's shot through the stomach—it's a question of minutes."

"Good lord, man, why didn't you say so?" North wheeled and lunged himself onto his knees. "Ladd, listen, you've got to hear me! Is Kilgour still alive?" North demanded in an agony of suspense.

"The lips had trouble in forming the word, 'Maybe.'"
"Where is he?"

"At—at—Hart—Melhorne—"
Even as the man from G-2 bent lower to catch the words, faint as the scraping of a feather over silk, Dr. Ladd drew a slow, shuddering breath which, in escaping, blew out the last spark of his life.

"He's Armstrong all right," Richardson began, pointing to a small suitcase which lay near by. "He was all ready to pay off. That's full of pounds sterling, easily—"
"To blazes with that!" North was towering over Hart. He knew his subject and spoke accordingly. "Where's Kilgour? Speak up, or I'll begin by kicking out your teeth with my heel!"

When, sinewy and forbidding, North bent his leg as if to carry out the threat, Hart uttered a shrill squeak.

"Don't hurt me! Don't hurt me, Capt'n. I'll sing," he chattered. "It was Melhorne who took him for a ride two nights back. Took him somewhere downriver."

A plaintive note entered Hart's speech. "That mull of Melhorne's talked the boss into it—letting Stag handle Kilgour." He struggled up on one elbow, venomous again. "Say, I'll bet that dizzy dame is at the bottom of this pinch!"

Somehow it came home to North that Hart was telling the truth. In his mind he groped frantically, then perceived the one sure pointer. Melhorne! But where was Melhorne? "I'm borrowing the staff car," North told Clive and hurried down the battered steps three at a stride.

"The European prisoners are there, Effendi," a towering police sergeant said, indicating a small, solidly built house near the beach. Cooped in a small, malodorous room reeking of sheep, three captives stood or sat about; a big scowling Irishman, a sullen-looking German and Colonel Sturtevant Melhorne who looked up and grinned a trifle shamefacedly when North entered.

"Well, Skipper," said he without taking a cigarette from a corner of his mouth, "when it comes to slipping a monkey wrench into the wheels of my progress, you're a past master. Thought I'd foreseen everything," he paused, "because I never did believe you about that retiring business 100 per cent. Well, Skipper, I'm cleaned again, to the bottom of the locker this time!"

"Fortunes of the game, Stag," I said soothingly. "I suppose you know this is no laughing matter? You're due for a long stretch in the calabozo."
"I expect so," the other admitted wearily. "Won't be the first time though, and well— Say, what's happened to Doc and the others?"

"Doctor Ladd and wife are both dead, Stag."

"Dead?" By the lantern light the other's pale brown eyes batted rapidly several times. "Too bad. Doc had brains. What about that little hyena, Hart?"
"Shot through the hips. He'll never walk again."

A hard grin flittered over Melhorne's wind-burned countenance. "Ain't that life for you? Why couldn't that rat have got the works instead of the Doc?"

"Stag?"
"Yeh? What is it?"

"What about Kilgour? He's my friend—a real one."

The prisoner drew a long, slow breath. "Skipper, I don't figure I'll answer that. At least not until you tell me something. Where is Melhorne?"

"Because it can't do a bit of harm I'll tell you, Stag," North replied, speaking very deliberately. "She's safe in Room 706, Hotel de Lesseps in Port Said. She's registered as Mrs. Gillette."

"How'd she get there?"
"I took her there."

"Is she still there?"
"She is unless she's a female Houdini, because she's handcuffed to the bedstead," came his careless reply.

"And the key is right here in my pocket."
The soldier of fortune's leathery features relaxed. "Thanks! I've been worried sick over her. Say, Skipper, you're sure she's not hurt?"

"She's not hurt, Stag, and I wish it were possible to get her out of this country. Melhorne will be past her best looks long before she gets out of prison. The English don't see much humor in gunrunning. They've got you both dead to rights."

"Yeh, I know it. Funny thing," Stag mused bitterly, "probably you won't believe it, but I never tumbled till a couple of days ago that those garter murders were Doc Ladd's doing. Made me kind of sick. Killing in a scrap is right and fair, but murder and kidnapping is something else again. Believe you me I put up a holler when that she-devil Zara talked about mutilating your Linney pal."

"Yes, Stag, I heard about that."
"As I was saying," he seemed to swell a guy to get bumped off like that, so when I went out to meet my boat off shore this morning I hugged him along. If he ain't already been located, you'll find him roped and gagged in the chain locker. Don't look at me so funny. It's true, Skipper, every word of it."

And somehow Hugh North knew this was so. "Thanks, Stag," said he. "I somehow couldn't picture you pulling such dirty work. When did you first tumble about the garter murders?"

"The night Natika Black got bumped off. The Doc says to me they were just going to kidnap her out of the temple, keep her quiet until we got our guns landed, but Hart and Zara double-crossed me. When I saw the red garter on the Black doll's leg the answer came to me all in a heap. Yeh, we knew all the time she was in with Hasid and Philipides."

"Philipides?"
"Sure, he was backing Hasid, but neither of them had Ladd spotted for what he was. Hasid tried to hire me—made me quite a proposition. Melhorne says you know all about it, though. By the way, you got her wrong on that. She was scared Hasid would try knocking me off if I wouldn't listen to him—so she came along to keep an eye on us."

"Clad of a momentary relaxation, North smoked a cigarette, commented on generalities. Finally he said:
"Well, Stag, let's get going. Suppose I take you to Port Said myself? Guess you'd rather go that way than with the rest of the prisoners."

The soldier of fortune cast him a grateful grin and got up, peering intently at the man from G-2's impassive features.

Pausing long enough to give directions for the liberation of Kilgour, North motioned Melhorne into the staff car, gave his destination to a police sergeant and hurriedly put the automobile in gear.

Once clear of the defile he thrust his pistol into a side pocket and settled down to hard driving over a terrain increasingly revealed by the breaking of dawn.

Fixing his gaze on the speedometer Melhorne retired into a brown study. Presently he fished out a handful of change and for some minutes jingled it nervously.

As the car began skimming across a wide stretch of wasteland, a half crown fell to the floor. Sighing, Stag stooped, but even as he bent, his hand shot out. In a twinkling he had North's gun and was jamming it into the driver's side.

"Stop the car!"
North jammed on the brakes and without command promptly raised his hands.

"You're smart, Skipper. Now keep 'em that way!"

Eyes riveted on North, he searched the Intelligence captain's coat pockets until he came across a small bright key such as might fit a handcuff.

"This the one?"
"Yes. But you'll be sorry for this, Stag."

"Maybe," Melhorne grunted, "but not so sorry as to spend ten years in chokoy." Then he added, but none too menacingly, "Now, Skipper, you can get out and walk slowly back toward Berak."

"You're an ungrateful swine!" snapped the man from G-2, yet anger was not reflected in his eyes. "I reckon so, and I hate to do this, Skipper, what with you being a deacon. But I've got a heavy date in Port Said. If I remember right, there's a German boat sailing first thing this morning. Adios," he called as soon as the man from G-2 had stepped out of the car. "See you in church!"

There ensued a harsh grinding of gears, and under the menace of his own 32, Hugh North stepped back, a straight figure wearing a curious half smile.

"So long," he called to the girl friend, "he called once the staff car started down the road at a furious clip. North watched the little olive-green touring car out of sight, then climbed back onto the road and set his face toward Berak. He began to whistle softly.

The Great Game of Politics

criticism at all, although underneath there has been a good deal of personal feeling. The earning power of Mrs. Roosevelt has greatly increased. Her lectures have become more numerous and better paid; her magazine articles more frequent, and her syndicated column has gained a wider, and hence more lucrative for her, circulation.

IN addition, Mrs. Roosevelt has injected herself more and more into public affairs. By her attitude toward the Dies committee, her extraordinary championship of the Communistly flavored American Youth Congress, and her frequent public comments upon foreign affairs, she has become today more of a public figure than before—more of one than all the other Presidential wives in American history combined. Two years ago the statement was made in this place that since her husband became President she had spoken and written, for pay, more words than any other woman in the country had spoken or written in anything like the same length of time—probably more than any other woman in the world's history. In brief, she had made a record.

IT was also stated that, with the exception of a few fabulous moving-picture stars, she had in recent years made more money than any other woman. Since then that statement has become more indisputably true. She stands today, both as to production and compensation, in a class by herself. None of this has hurt Mrs. Roosevelt. On the contrary, her popularity has steadily grown, and all the polls show her now as better liked than her husband. Nor does it seem to have hurt her children. Even the most recent exploit of James Roosevelt in securing for his insurance firm (of which his mother is a director) the business of the Government-owned shipping line of which ex-Senator McAdoo is the head did not seem to stir the public pulse.

AND now it is announced that Mrs. Roosevelt has signed a long-time radio contract with a soap company. Twice a week she is to broadcast for the Sweetheart Toilet Soap Corporation. The pay for this has not been made public, but, as it is to be over a national hook, clearly it will not be small. Mrs. Roosevelt has stated that her previous radio earnings have been given to charity. She has never made it clear whether her syndicate, magazine articles, royalties and lecture fees went the same way or not.

BUT that is not the point. The point is that, whether she gives all her earnings to charity, as some say, or only part, as others say; whether the proceeds of the new contract go to some worthy cause or into her own purse, still it is not easy to relish the fact that a toilet-soap manufacturer can hire the wife of the President of the United States for a purely commercial purpose. If this is the "normal life" for the President's wife, standards indeed changed. It hardly seems an adequate reason to say, what undoubtedly is true, that she is a fine woman who does a great deal of good and whose sympathies are with the downtrodden and oppressed. Yet most of the people appear to think so, and merely to dissent from that view probably will be regarded as a dastardly attack inspired by some low motive.

Bowl Salads All Season From These Green Crops

The basis for every bowl salad consists of green leaves. Novelty and change are desirable in the diet, so it is a mistake to get into the habit of using the same materials for salads all the year around.

Since head lettuce has become available every month in the year, there is great temptation to let the salad course become a routine matter of a slice or wedge of head lettuce, spattered with dressing. After a winter of this, spring finds the palate somewhat weary, perhaps inclined to regard the salad course as health food, rather than a tempting, delicious treat, as it should be.

To the home gardener, who can spare a few square feet of garden space for producing leaves, an interesting salad program is possible. First there is leaf lettuce, so different from the heading type that it seems another vegetable. It excels in flavor, it takes the dressing better, and the doctors say its green leaves are far richer in vitamin A. This vitamin, they say, is not found in leaves that are bleached white, as are the hearts of head lettuce.

Leaf lettuce comes in two types—the butter leaves, and the crisp leaves. The butter leaves are thicker, and darker green, with finer flavor, the experts say. Crisp leaves are lighter green in color, thin and somewhat brittle. Examples are Black Seeded Simpson, a butter type, and Grand Rapids, a crisp leaf type. Experts give first place in their esteem to the butter leaves, which they grow at the rate of 4 pounds to 100 square feet.

produces oval leaves, standing upright, is highly esteemed by French salad experts. It is a good late lettuce, standing heat better than the leaf varieties. The leaves can be bleached by tying them up as they near maturity, but this merely changes their color, and lessens their vitamin content.

For summer leaves, chicory, also known as endive, is more available than lettuce, which usually runs to seed in midsummer. Endive may be had with curly leaves, or broad leaves. Many like the curly leaves best for summer, and broad leaves (escarolle) for fall, as they endure frost and become sweeter after the first frosts. Sow both types in drills, thin out to six or eight inches.

Leaf crops grown in a similar manner, and much esteemed in bowl salads, include corn salad, which is very hardy and can be harvested late in the fall; and upland garden cress, which gives a pungent flavor to the salad.

In the fall lettuce may be grown again; and the Chinese cabbage leaves are delicious. Chinese cabbage may be grown in the spring, with rich soil and an early start. But in midsummer, it always runs to seed. A late crop has no such tendency, and heads are easily produced in the fall, from plants started in late June.

All leaf crops demand rich soil. They must grow fast without check, otherwise the leaves are tough and have a bitter flavor. Plant food should be applied to the soil in which they grow at the rate of 4 pounds to 100 square feet.

DOYLESTOWN WINS COUNTY BASKETBALL INDEPENDENT TITLE

County Seat Team Defeats Morrisville Simpson Reds By Narrow Margin

FINAL SCORE IS 32 TO 30

Doylestown Will Play Winner of Montgomery County Title Tonight

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 9.—Doylestown Red Raiders won the Bucks county independent basketball championship on the National Farm School floor Saturday night by eliminating last year's winners, the Morrisville Simpson Reds, 32 to 30, in a hectic game.

The County Seat team will meet the winner of the Montgomery county title tonight in Stewart High gym at Norristown in the semi-final round of the four-county championship tourney sponsored by the Suburban Sports Writers' Association.

Saturday night's game was a hard-fought affair from start to finish with Doylestown leading all the way by a close margin. A 22 to 14 lead at half-time saved the Raiders, for the Morrisville quintet outscored the champs in the last half, 16 to 10. Both teams centered eight shots from the charity-marker, Doylestown making a better showing than the visitors who centered but eight out of 18 shots.

LANDRETH BALL TEAM HAS FIRST PRACTICE

Sunday afternoon, Manager Landreth put the "Farmers" through a 2½ hour workout at Landreth Ball Park, and as the weather was ideal for baseball, the boys enjoyed the practice and much good came of the workout. So early in the season it was difficult for many of last year's team to get out, but the boys engaged in the long batting drill, no infield practice being held; although, the outfielders chased a few flies.

The most prominent players on hand were pitchers Al Carey, Howard Black and Billy Gallagher; first baseman, Bill Griggs, second baseman Eddie Liberatore, shortstop Larry David, third base George Dougherty, left field Johnny Miksis, center field Vic Rockhill and Richfield Ray Costello.

About a dozen other boys showed up for the workout on Saturday afternoon. The "Farmers" will workout again next Saturday and Sunday from 2:30 to 5:00. The prospects for 1940 are bright and many good games are in store for the loyal Bristol baseball fans.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE ELECTS OFFICERS; FOUR JOIN CIRCUIT

Thomas Juno is Again Chosen As Head of The League

OTHER CLUBS TO JOIN

Another Meeting To Be Held On Next Monday Evening

Holding its first meeting of the season, the Bristol Twilight League elected its officers for the ensuing year. They are: President, Thomas Juno; vice-president, Robert Sutton; secretary and treasurer, William White. The meeting was held in the meeting-room of the St. Ann's Athletic Association, last night.

Four clubs were represented while a fifth was heard from but no definite answer given as to whether or not they will join the circuit. The teams present were: Hall Aluminum, Rohm and Haas, Odd Fellows and Diamond. Grundy's did not have a representative because a manager has not been picked as yet. Hall Aluminum will give their answer at the next meeting. Several clubs were mentioned that had possibilities of joining the loop and the officers were instructed to contact these teams and give a reply at the meeting next Monday night.

Representatives last night were: Hall Aluminum, William Williams and Ernie Nellis; Rohm and Haas, Gene Dugan; Diamond, Joseph Diamanti; Odd Fellows, Harry Morrell and Robert Sutton.

phila, and State Representatives Wilson L. Yeakel and Thomas B. Stockham.

The fire originated about three p. m. in the old portion of the club headquarters, near the entrance. A fire had been started in preparation for the evening event. The janitor, it is stated, some time later after leaving the structure, on glancing back saw smoke emanating from the roof. It is believed the stove became overheated, the side wall becoming ignited, the fire spreading up toward the roof. The flames finally broke out in the cornice, and a hole approximately 30 feet in diameter was burned in the roof which was of composition shingles. A large electric sign, that of an elephant, toppled through the roof as it weakened from the fire. The interior was damaged by water and smoke, and a number of folding chairs were burned or blackened.

The new portion was harmed to some extent by water and smoke also; and damage is estimated at $1,000. It is stated that insurance will cover the loss.

Plans are already being made to repair the building, and it is expected the work will be accomplished by the time of the next session.

The Tyro Grange Hall was immediately rented for the meeting of last evening, and the crowd was so large it could not be accommodated therein.

Mr. Turner, in addressing the large gathering spoke on the question of job mobilization. He told of the terrific expense to which the government has gone to make jobs, "and still a condition of unemployment exists in appalling numbers."

State Senator Farrell reminisced about Bucks County, recalling old friendships here. He paid high tribute to "Ted" Watson, register of wills of Bucks County, and who formerly served as secretary to ex-Senator Clarence J. Buckman.

Brief remarks were made by Representatives Wilson Yeakel and Thomas B. Stockham.

During the latter part of the evening, T. L. Gustin, of Lahaska, well-known horseman, entertained with a show of fine calibre.

Britain and France Swing Into Action to Defend Scandinavia

guns of Norwegian shore batteries.

Occupation of Copenhagen took place at midnight when a gigantic fleet of German airplanes roared over Copenhagen, dropping leaflets calling upon the population to keep calm and to offer no resistance.

Despite its grave fears of invasion Sweden had taken no active measures except for continued and accelerated mobilization, up to 11 a. m. The foreign affairs committee of the parliament met throughout the day for consultation with the cabinet.

By International News Service

War hit Scandinavia like a thunderbolt today as German invaded Denmark and Norway.

Norway immediately appealed to Anglo-French allies for aid and they promised it would be provided "forthwith," thereby leading to the prospect that Europe's war may be fought in the North.

Sweden too was fearful that she would be involved and hastily mobilized her army, navy and air force according to advices received in London.

In London the Swedish minister said, he could not see how Sweden could remain out of the war.

Germany's forces rolled rapidly over Denmark in a speedy but bloodless blitzkrieg, occupying Copenhagen and other key points, and also occupied numerous ports in Norway.

Oslo was subjected to air raids and the Norwegian government moved to Hamar.

The German high command announced officially that Norway and Denmark had been "occupied" in order to "counteract a British attack on the neutrality of both countries."

The Germans stated that the Army had taken Norway and Denmark under its "protection," but the Norwegian reaction was to announce that Norway and Germany were at war.

Denmark, unable to resist, apparently capitulated without opposition. Its armed forces retreated before the advancing Germans, keeping half a mile away from the Nazi vanguard.

Germany made it clear that the double invasion was staged in retaliation for the Anglo-French mining of Norwegian waters, which the Germans termed an "abandonment of neutrality."

Three separate pronouncements were made outlining the German view, one a military statement to the Norwegian and Danish people, the second a pronouncement to the world by German propaganda minister Joseph Goebbels and the third a memorandum to the Danish and Norwegian governments.

All these bore the same burden—that of pinning blame for the German action upon Britain and France.

It was estimated that two German army corps were taking control of Norway and Denmark, evidently without meeting effective resistance even from Norway.

In Washington, as in capitals all over the world, lights burned throughout the night as anxious officials watched the extension of the war. President Roosevelt at his Hyde Park estate was informed of developments and today was speeding back to Washington as quickly as possible.
